Let's Start!

Let's borrow a cup of sugar!

Learning Outcome

Identify information about people, their likes and dislikes, homes and countries in simple spoken and written situations.

Can Do Statements

- I can ask to borrow something.
- I can talk about people's personalities.
- I can express statements joined by because.

Ask your partner:

- What things do you borrow?
- What things do you lend?

Let's Explore!

Sally wants to bake an apple pie ... but she has no sugar! What does she do?

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Tommy: Hello ...
- Sally: Hey, Tommy. I want to borrow a cup of sugar because I'm baking a pie. Is your mom here?
- Tommy: MOM!
- Angie: Hey Sally. How are you? Do you want to come in?
- Sally: I'm well, thanks Angie. No, that's OK. Can I borrow a cup of sugar? I want to bake a pie, but I don't have enough sugar.
- Angie: Of course. Come on in.
- Sally: Thanks. I don't want to bother you ...
- Angie: Oh Sally, you are too polite. Don't worry about it. Come in!
- Sally: You are very friendly. I'm lucky my next-door neighbor is so kind!
- Angie: Can I borrow a piece or two of pie?
- Sally: I'd be happy to give you a piece because you're my favorite neighbor and you're very helpful! You don't have to give it back!

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Simple Connectors

You use connectors to join words and phrases. They are usually found in the middle of a sentence. They connect ideas or sentences together.

Connector	Explanation	Example
and	Connects statements or ideas that are similar	You're kind and helpful.
but	Connects statements that express opposite ideas	That's very kind of you to ask but it's okay.
or	Gives options or choices	They are not nice or friendly.
because	Gives a reason	She is friendly because she helps us.

Asking to Borrow Things

You use the modals can or could when you ask to borrow things.

Structure of question:

Can/Could + Subject + borrow + object ?

Modals	Examples
can	Can I borrow a cup of sugar, please?
could	Could we borrow your book, please? Could you lend* me your book tonight?

*You use lend to say that you give something to another person. You use borrow to say that you get something from another person.
