Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Accurately exchange information about buying things in communicative situations.

Can Do Statements

- I can say what I like and dislike.
- I can express how far or how near objects are.
- I can ask for things in a supermarket.

Ask your partner:

- What other things (not including food) do you buy at the supermarket?
- How do you usually pay for your shopping?

Let's Explore!

Chelsea is at the supermarket! She needs help!

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Clerk: How are you? Can I help you?
- Chelsea: Yes. I am looking for ingredients for a meat dish.
- Clerk: Do you like cooking? What ingredients?
- Chelsea: Yes, I love to cook! Well, this recipe calls for beef, potatoes and carrots. Can you tell me where the beef is?
- Clerk: The beef is in that aisle. Why don't I show you?
- Chelsea: Thanks, that's very kind of you.
- Clerk: No problem, ma'am. Here is the meat aisle. These are on sale for $3.50 a pound.
- Chelsea: Hmm ... I don't really like this beef. Is there any chicken?
- Clerk: Yes, over there. Those are fresh.
- Chelsea: OK, where can I find the vegetables?
- Clerk: This way. You should buy these potatoes. I like these. The carrots are over there.
- Chelsea: Thanks! You are very helpful. Where is the checkout line? Where's my wallet?

Learning Points

Demonstrative Adjectives and Pronouns

Demonstratives are words that show the person or thing you are talking about.

The demonstratives are: this, that, these and those.

Demonstratives tell us about number (singular or plural) and distance (near or far).

There are demonstrative adjectives and demonstrative pronouns.

A demonstrative adjective tells us about the noun. It comes before the noun.

This potato is good. That potato is bad.

I like those sweet potatoes. These large onions are on sale for $2.00 a pound.

A demonstrative pronoun replaces a noun. It is on its own.

This is good. That is bad.

I like these. I bake those once a month.

Asking Questions at the Supermarket

You can ask questions at the supermarket when you want to find something.

Questions	Examples
Can you tell me where ... ?	Can you tell where the sweet potatoes are?
Where can I find ... ?	Where can I find potatoes?
Do you have any ... (in stock)?	Do you have any onions in stock?
I am looking for (a) ...	I am looking for the apples on sale for $1.00.
